Malcolm MacDonald, colonial secretary, gave the prime minister the latest reports on related tensions in the Holy Land. They discussed the return of the British high commissioner on the partition of Palestine which left Jerusalem in London to other efforts to mediate the minority issue.

The Earl of Perth, British ambassador at Rome, called at the foreign office to spend three hours with Lord Halifax and other officials.

Best Of Watermelons Have Deep Bass Voice

Bulletin Patterns

A Sun Dress With Muslin For Specialist, Afternoon or Town Wear

By MRS. GAYNOR NADDOX
Better watermelons are, being marketed every year.

The best melons are bright, lustrous green, with a creamy yellow-green, or white, inside.

This background is clearly seen when the melon is cut in half, revealing the green, or white, inside.

Even the size of watermelons has improved for our domestic uses. In the past, homemakers have complained that their refrigerators were not big enough to hold a whole watermelon. Melons were getting even larger, and the mechanical refrigerators tended to be smaller than the old box.

NEW SMALL MELON

New growers are producing a new melon model to fit the new refrigerators. They're better adapted to the family size. One of the new varieties of watermelons, new melons, the Northern Sweet, developed by the Minnesota Agricultural Experiment Station from seed imported from the Volga area of Russia, weighs 9 lbs.

This is less than half the weight thought necessary to insure a good melon in some of the older varieties, such as the Tom Watson or Thumbrand Grey.

The color, sweetness and lack of fiber of the new melon has been approved by many buyers—and many northern gardeners. The new variety requires nearly a month less time from planting to picking than some southern favorites.

No watermelon would be complete without a good recipe for watermelon pickles. Here's a plan from experts of the Bureau of Home Economics.

WATERMELON PICKLE

Four pounds watermelon rind, sliced into 1/2 inch cubes, 2 quarts cold water and 10 grams or 2 tablespoons salt, 2 quarts vinegar, 1 quart water, 4 1/2 pounds granulated sugar, 2 tablespoons from clove, ten 2-inch pieces of stick cinnamon.

Select rind from firm, not over-ripe melon and before weighing trim off green skin and pink flesh. Cut in 1-inch cubes and soak for 24 hours in the lime water.

Drain the watermelon rind and cover with fresh water and cook for 1 1/2 hours or until tender. Add the water and salt, let stand overnight in this same water and next morning drain. Bring to the boiling point the vinegar, 1 quart of water, the sugar, and the spices tied together in a muslin bag. Add the drained watermelon and boil gently for 2 hours, or until the rind is tender. Remove the rind, pack in sterilized jars, seal, and store in a cool place.

Tomorrow's Menu

LUNCHEON: Tomato salad, lettuce and mayonnaise, corned beef, radishes, cold watermelon, coffee, milk.

DOROTHY DIX Says:

A famous doctor declared not long ago that sympathy killed as many sick people as disease did, and that many men and women who might have well been swept into their graves by the tears of pity of their loving relatives.

Then, being hot with his subject, he spent on for a minute on an incident that had just occurred in his practice. "For months," he said, "I have been trying to build up and calm down a definite, scientific patient of mine so that she will be able to stand an operation that is absolutely necessary."

"At last I had got her fit and I told her that the next day I would operate, but when I went in to see her I found her surrounded by her weeping friends and family who were patting her hands, kissing her brow, 'pooing' her and making her feel that they were taking a last farewell. Under their sympathetic ministrations she had grown so hysterical that her temperature had shot up and she was so hysterical that an operation was out of the question. All my work was undone and she was to be done over."

"Believe me, if we doctors told the truth, we would be killed by Sympathy" on a mass death certificate. There is no such depressive drug known to materia medica as pity and no tonic equal to a good 'bawling'."

The experience of all of us laymen confirms the physician's diagnosis of the deadly effect of sympathy on the human system. All of us know dozens of people who have been made chronic invalids by being pitied. Boys and girls who were wealings and never-does-better because their mothers were so sorry for them when they had the measles that they said to them that they didn't have the measles and strength to do anything.

Women who lay in a couch half their lives because their husbands coaxed and petted them because of their poor nerves or their weak hearts. Men who gave up their jobs at middle age, sat down on the do-nothing stool and let their children support them because their family's solicitude and inquiries about how they felt today, and what did the doctor say about their symptoms, made them exaggerate a slight indisposition into a fatal malady.

And we have all seen these same victims of sympathy cured as if by magic when their dopes were withdrawn. When nobody cared whether they were well or sick they got well. When nobody noticed that they were ill and pined away they died. Many a friend and delicate woman who has been coaxed all of her life by a friend, mother and husband has not only got up from her bed and walked, but taken in swimming to support herself and her children when the necessity arose.

"Sympathy not only makes invalids, it also makes failures. It breeds weakness instead of strength. It turns us into cowards and quitters instead of making us brave and valiant."

Many a boy's and girl's white life is ruined by a mother who sheds tears of pity over their little downy cheeks and backs and leaves poor spiritless creatures incapable of achieving anything. Mothers who are so sorry for their children that they cry over them and stand behind a counter instead of spending their time animating herself that she makes Mary feel that she is a martyr that it isn't worth while to try to do anything at all or to get ahead in a world that is against her. Mothers pitier poor John because he can't go to college and have sport cars at rich men's sons but she kills every bit of ambition in him and makes him think that it isn't worth while working any more.

Special To Citizens Proposals For Sale Of Energy

POWER SALES PLAN STUDIED BY CITY NOW

Committee Recommends Increased Use Of Electric Ranges

To stimulate consumption of electric power during off-peak periods, the city finance committee will recommend to council that the city supply part of the installation cost of electric kitchen ranges in homes, on condition that manufacturers and distributors pay the balance.

This proposal was made by City Commissioner R. G. Gibb, William Barnhouse, superintendent of the electric light department, and R. G. Watson, power plant superintendent. The action of the committee at a meeting Wednesday afternoon was taken on a motion by Ald. A. Bisset, supported by Ald. J. A. Macdonald and Ald. J. T. McCrae.

HIGH CHARGE
Cost of installation of electric stoves is approximately $30, it was explained by Mr. Watson, who hangers sale of the stoves in favor of gas stoves. The reason is due to the fact that power lead-ins to houses are for lighting only and when wiring must be done for the stoves, pipe lead-ins for gas and water must be made for the stoves. Installing electric ranges, under provision of bylaws, which make installation of electric ranges a simpler problem.

Under the committee's recommendation, the city would provide $10 of the cost of electric stove installation, the balance to be paid by makers or sellers of the stoves. In the case of persons already owning electric stoves, the city would supply a maximum of $10 toward installation. This cost is proposed for a trial period of six months.

Many persons turned away from purchases of electric range when they learned of the cost of installation. Commissioner Gibb said that agents for the stoves in this city for installation rather than loss of money.

PUSH SALE
"We will have to push the sale of electric ranges in the next few years in order to have enough of them in use to advertise them properly," Mr. Gibb said.

Commissioner Gibb said the benefit to sales of power over a period of years would be large. The power used is chiefly "off-peak" power, which is sold in the middle of the day and in the summer, when consumption of power for lighting is at a low point.

Promotion of power consumption by this means would be an important adjunct to the program of extension and enlargement of the power plant, Mr. Gibb felt.

Nikki greeted him with a look of relief and question. "Uncle Jim," he said breathlessly, "shot through the back."

Nikki gasped. She had been prepared for nasty things but hardly that.

"Bancroft," she repeated, "but Steve, who?"

Steve shook his head.

"Don't know. I was afraid it would be Fink," Nikki noted.

The same fear had possessed her, but now a compelling dread drove out every other emotion.

Steve shook his head. "I don't know. But I wouldn't worry about them yet. They're not babes in the wood."

Dear God. And she had let them all come on this trip without a warning. Bancroft was dead. The shock of that discovery almost made her forget his meaning—to her—in this strange drama.

Her mind went back to her father and the meeting on the train.

The soft words of Bancroft with their metallic, dangerous undertone. Steve's backyard. Her father. Her own thoughts started.

"Steve," she cried. "That money must be locked in the cabin at the ranch."

"Men have been murdered for less," he said. "They may need better get back to the camp. What might happen to anyone trying to stop this?"

Steve said nothing. He knew, like Nikki, that it was a trap.

"I expect so," Steve was sure of it. "Sario had killed one man. And that accident on the trail. Steve was sure now, wasn't an accident. Even to an inexperienced woodsman like Sario, it must have been obvious that a sharp kick would send his horse stumbling forward and that gravity would do the rest."

"Steve, let's be careful."

"We will be," he glanced at her reassuringly.

They were walking on now, following the unmarked path that Sario had taken to the top of the hill. It was still early. Nikki glanced back at the camp. Woody had reached camp with word of the landslide. He couldn't have known for sure that they were safe and had not been buried under the slide. She knew they would start searching immediately.

Uncle Jim and Hank were near the camp spread out below them, an eighth of a mile away. Smoke arose from the fire in front of the cabin, but there was no sign of life.

"We're somewhere," said Steve. "Don't better circle a little and come up from the left. There's more cover that way."

They made their way down the hillside and toward the camp, checking their path carefully and trying to keep the trees and brush between them and the clearing, but there were many open spaces where there was no cover. Still there was no sign of life. The camp looked deserted.

Then as they came cautiously from the last fringe of trees, Sario stepped from behind the cabin, his right hand held a stubby, wicked automatic.

"I thought you'd be coming," he said. "Come on over near the fire. Don't try any funny business. We're playing right up, my little ones."

He halted the player.

"This is a trap. I know something about it. I don't trust you."

CHAPTER XII

As Nikki and Steve moved over into the center of the clearing under the waving directions of the automatic in Sario's hand, they heard a rifle shot in the distance. It was followed by a second and a third and the sounds dotted a semicircle in the direction Steve and Nikki and Woody had taken when they left camp the day before.

Three shots, thought Steve, meant Uncle Jim, Hank and Woody were searching separately. Fake probably was with one of them. He wouldn't be alone. One shot meant, of course, they had found something. They couldn't very well when the person they hunted were safely back in camp. Well they were back in camp anyway. Steve and Nikki, if they were not.

He glanced at Sario. The man was backing toward the cabin toward which a rifle stood.

Of course, thought Steve, he'll command the signal. Sario will wait. He watched Sario jab the pistol into his hip pocket and stoop for the rifle and for a moment Sario's hand making a break. If he made the break he could at least wear the rifle. Then he quickly discarded the idea. Nikki would be left alone with the rifle. Sario's thought had gone along the same line.

"Don't try it," he said with an evil grin. "I'll get one of you and it might be the rifle."

He picked up the rifle and fired, not more but twice in the air.

That will bring the rifle and fired, thought Steve, startled. If one shot meant no luck, certainly two shots would mean he and Nikki had been found. Before he had time to go along along that thought, Sario spoke.

"You two all get up that tree. Face toward the fire and don't try anything. It wouldn't be healthy. The other three are waiting. I would a cruel error in the direction from whence the shot had come. 'Don't try any more or you'll die the taking.'"

They sat down, their backs to the tree, facing the clearing and the cabin at their right. Sario placed the rifle on the bench by the cabin and sat down also, the pistol held carefully in his two hands.

"What's he going to do," whispered Nikki.

"Ambush the others when they come in to supper," Steve whispered back. And then as he glanced at the answer.

"He'll need someone to assist him back to the ranch."

They sat quietly for several minutes. Nikki shifted uncomfortably. After Sario had ambushed the others, then what? He had murdered Bancroft. A man who had killed once probably wouldn't try very much about repeating the crime. Steve remembered, suddenly, the day they had walked through the clearing. Central, she and Steve and her father. No hint of tragedy in the bright sunshine of that day, no warning of the things ahead. Then the money on the train and the realization that her father was somehow involved with the sinister Bancroft and his company. She looked at the hunched figure on the bench. No. Her father couldn't be to blame for all this. He just couldn't. But Bancroft's reference to the "three amigos" kept coming back.

"Hungry?" asked Steve, with a quick glance at the gunner.

I guess so, said Nikki. "I hadn't thought about it."

"Sario," called Steve. "We haven't eaten much lately. Couldn't we have a little food while we're waiting?"

"Shut up," said Sario. "You'll get something to eat later maybe."

"Isn't there some way we can earn the money?" whispered Nikki.

"I've been trying to think of a way," answered Steve. "But it's too dangerous now. Wait until the others get here."

"Cut out the waiting," said Sario roughly. "Can it—all of it, or else."

A moment later they heard a halloo. Sario came to abrupt attention. He slipped the rifle behind the bench, where it would be out of sight but within easy reach. The automatic he held between his knees.

"Give 'em a call," he ordered Nikki. "Just use it and don't try anything."

"Give 'em a call," he ordered Nikki. "Just use it and don't try anything."

CALGARY WILL ADOPT YOUTH TRAINING PLAN

City Council Endorses Scheme—Free Gym Classes In Winter

CALGARY, Aug. 4.—Making preliminary arrangements for a province-wide youth training scheme this fall and winter, J. H. Ross, provincial supervisor under the Dominion youth training plan, is at present making a tour of Alberta. He is accompanied by Thomas Ruben, instructor under the plan in British Columbia.

At a meeting Wednesday, a sub-committee of the Calgary city council, set up to study the Dominion provincial project, voted unanimously to recommend Calgary's cooperation in the plan. It established the training project may embrace 2,000 young Canadians in free gymnastic classes during the winter months.

Scout governments will bear the cost of paying instructors under the scheme while the city will nominate competent instructors and make provisions for buildings and equipment.

Four men and two women, would be required in Calgary.

The plan is limited to persons between the ages of 16 and 35 and should embrace 20,000 people throughout Alberta during the coming year, according to Mr. Ross.

Mr. Ross will visit Medicine Hat today, Wednesday, Friday and Edmonton next Tuesday.

Pearl White Of Early Cinema Days Is Dead

Pearl White, actress in the early days of the motion picture, died today in the American hospital in Paris.

She was 43 and had been ill for several weeks of a liver ailment. To the days when the motion picture business was young, Pearl White audiences sat on the edge of their seats thrilling to the "Exploits of Elaine". In adventure-packed serial in which the beautiful heroine managed to reach death's door at the end of each chapter, never to die.

CATAPULTED TO FAME "Pauline" was Pearl White, blue-eyed actress catapulted to fame as the first of the damsel-in-distress screen. Bred the "Perils of Pauline" and a dozen other serials of the same melodramatic cast.

Pearl White gave rise to the "Pauline" craze in the early 20's. For several years, she was in the top international art in Paris and London. In later years she lived more quietly.

DID OWN STUNTS Pearl White did her own stunts. She herself leaped from speeding trains, clung by fingernails to bridges and swam, and escaped the jaws of death on swinging ladders.

In those days there were no stunts or doubles.

On a 1933 trip to London, Miss White crossed the English channel in semi-regal state, with a part of the steamer deck ripped off for her special use.

PEARL WHITE SPECIAL In England, a silver bracelet around her right ankle, Miss White was taken to London on a special train tagged "Pearl White's Special".

A fleet of motor cars was drawn up in London, all labeled with the arrival of Pearl White special.

Miss White was born in Greenfield, Mo., March 4, 1895. She made her debut at six as "Little Eva" in "The Little Colonel" and her parents got $5 a week for her work.

CALGARY, Aug. 4.—United States postmaster-general, James A. Farley, left Alberta today for dinner last night.

GAME BIRDS ARE HOLDING OWN IN ALBERTA WATERS

Despite the fact there is less water in the country than there was last year, the waterfowl population of northern Alberta this year will be about the same as in 1937, according to C. S. Boddell, of New York, director of the Migratory Bird in America organization, who is now in the city.

Mr. Boddell spent part of last week in the Peace River and Grande Prairie districts with Col. Newman, Alberta's supervisor for Ducks Unlimited. Checking on the duck count, the two game bird experts said they found conditions satisfactory.

By the end of August, figures for the number of ducks will be available in Alberta, Saskatchewan, and Manitoba where the census is completed.

Explaining that American bird men were interested in the game bird situation in Canada because most of the birds breed here in general thanks to the game bird organizations, as well as the game in general for their co-operation in the conservation of wild life.

The geologic calendar of the earth's past is divided into years, eras, and these, or, again, are divided up of 18 periods.

Sherlock Holmes' Aid Needed Here

CENTRALIA, Ill., Aug. 4.—To the post office of Centralia, a city of some 2,000 new oil boom residents, came Wednesday a letter addressed:

Miss Rachel White. If married, surname not Centralia, Ill.

Street not known. On the back of the envelope was the information that Miss White probably had married an oil man recently, and in one corner was the plea:

"Rush—delivery important."

Thousands Being Taught Use of New Defence Rings in Republic

By H. H. K. EULER OTTAWA, Aug. 4.—Hon. W. D. Lloyd, minister of trade and commerce, has planned a trip to the United Kingdom and Europe. He expects to sail the end of next week. The minister will visit the Glasgow exhibition.

The defense rings consist of hundreds of chain-link trenches, underground gun emplacements and concrete pillboxes and carefully concealed troop barracks.

RESERVE CALLED Reserve units are called up and transported to maneuvers grounds and the hidden barracks under cover of darkness in order to eliminate the possibility of any "incidents" which might offend Germany.

No only newspaper correspondent invited to attend the maneuvers since they began July 2, it noted the seriousness of military preparation the other day when a pursuit plane practicing aerial machine gun strafing almost decapitated me.

CRASHED AT TOP SPEED The plane came out of the group, skimmed close to the ground, and then crashed near me at full speed.

A soldier manning a machine gun was bowled over and received a broken arm and several ribs. The pilot was sent to the hospital with a critical back injury.

The maneuvers of the Czechs, one of many going on quietly throughout the country, convinced me that Czechoslovakia has one of the most efficient little armies in Europe.
